Fuel Prices to Rise

Sanjeev.Choudhary

New Delhi: Fuel prices are set to rise sharply again after falling or staying stable for a month as international rates have jumped and the rupee weakened. State-owned oil companies have kept rates of petrol and diesel unchanged for six days although global crude oil prices have increased about $3 a barrel during this period.

Since June 21, crude oil has gained more than $6 to reach $79.5 a barrel as the United States is seeking stronger compliance of its sanctions against Iran that traders fear could substantially reduce oil supply from the market. The decision of a cartel of key oil-producing countries to raise output by a million barrels per day is seen as insufficient to meet the rising demand, and has aided the recent surge in prices.

Crude oil prices have stayed high this year owing to factors such as robust demand, an official key oil-led by Saudi Arabia, and a weak dollar. A weak dollar is zooming gun to help and control last week of more India's imports near oil requirement. Since June 21, petrol has risen to ₹75.55 and diesel to ₹67.38 a liter.
